Recreation Commission Is Selected

In a joint executive meeting of the Carmel City Council and the Carmel Unified School District, three members at large mutually acceptable to both bodies, were selected to serve on the newly created Recreation District Commission, which will be the adult governing body of the Carmel Youth Center. They are: Mrs. Dorothy von Meier, Jim Glaser and Mark Raggett.

The five-man board is completed by one member of the School Board, and one member of the city council. Harold Neilsen has been chosen by the school board to represent them; the city council representative is yet to be announced. Superintendent Stuart Mitchell serves automatically in ex-officio capacity.

Confirmation of appointments will be made at the next city council meeting.

Sanitary Board Discusses AFL Union Picketing

Sharp disagreement over the situation of the AFL picketing in front of the place where work on a new sewer system would start marked the meeting Monday night of the Carmel Sanitary District. The picket represents the Operating Engineers Union, Local No. 3, and is directed against the Clyde C. Kennedy Company of San Francisco. The union charges the company with unfairness.

Board members were in variance on what should be done with Keith Evans showing sympathy to the side of the union as opposed to Clayton B. Neill.

A. L. Van Houtte

Albert Leon Van Houtte, a resident of Carmel for more than 20 years, was found dead in the backyard of his home yesterday morning, apparently the victim of a heart attack. A neighbor, Mrs. Annie Osbourne, discovered the body and notified the Carmel police who, in turn, notified Coroner Elmer Machado. Although death is believed due to natural causes, an autopsy has been ordered by the coroner.

Author and lecturer, Mr. Van Houtte recently had a volume of fiction accepted for spring publication by the Vanguard Press. Before coming to Carmel he had lectured widely throughout the country on psychological subjects. He had lived in both Mexico and the South Pacific for a number of years, and was considered an able authority on the art of both places.

Interested in the theater, he took part in many activities of local drama groups and was a member of the casts of both Joan of Lorraine and Dream Girl.

He is survived by a sister, Mrs. Isabel Phelps of San Francisco and a son, Robert Phelps, also of San Francisco.

Paul's Chapel in Pacific Grove is in charge of arrangements, which are pending.

Local Sterling Authority Speaks At Dedication Honoring Poet

Mrs. Zena Holman, Pacific Grove, on the invitation of the California Writers Club, spoke at Woodminster, October 8, at the dedication of a redwood to the memory of George Sterling. Since her talk was largely concerned with the part of the poet's life that was intimately associated with Carmel and Carmel people, we are reporting it in full.

BY ZENA G. HOLMAN

George Sterling dead? He isn't dead, no matter what you may have heard—not to me at least. No, indeed, he is quite alive. That he is alive to others also, is attested to by the fact that you are all here this evening in commemoration of the living George Sterling. He lives in every fragrant, salty breeze that sweeps across the Golden Gate to his "cool, grey city of love," or that blows in from Carmel Bay, wreathing the tall pines with grey plumage. He lives in every cry of the grey-breasted gull, in every beat of the surf on his beloved shore, in every song of the full-throated song bird in the green forest.

"Because the seed falls into the ground and dies, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit," said a certain great man centuries ago.

The seed of the redwood must die to produce the giant tree and in the seed, lives on in majesty and beauty, fulfilling its eternal destiny.

The immortal soul of our poet lives, as we know it must. But he left with us and for all who come after, the resurgent groping of that soul for expression. He tells us this in his own beautiful words—

The dream will live
And pass, to touch the hearts of other men

With morning and the glory of new light

Somehow, somewhere, in years less kind than these."

Reverend Robert J. Gannon of Fordham University, has written: "All true civilization is ninety per cent heirlooms and memories—an accumulation of small but precious deposits left by the countless generations that have gone before us."

George Sterling said: "Great Poets should have great critics. Poets, I imagine, do their best when stimulated by others' approval, not when discouraged by inattention."

It is to the everlasting shame of our society that poets are not more encouraged in their work.

How well he knew what he was talking about. Listen to this from one of his letters—"If you think it's easy for a poet to earn anything with his pen, glance over this letter from one of the sub-editors of a magazine of large circulation. He is a friend of mine, and his employers know me and feel kindly toward me—and yet? Thank the stars I've a small income. If I hadn't, it would be a case of back to bookkeeping and from that to suicide, for I couldn't stand it for long." "and if the swinish element wants what's commonly fed to them, the editor must give in—how the dollar can dictate."

Job says, "The ear trieth words as the mouth tasteth meat." Sterling's amazing power of expression—his immense vitality—grows upon one, must be accepted and reasoned with. With him time and space are eliminated and we learn of the magical sorcery of the planets—the moon and stars—witness his "Testimony of the Suns"—we return to earth and hold the fragile, ethereal beauty of an orchid in our hands and behold it as it were for the first time. Here is power and magic and mastery of form so impressive that they loom as the gift of an extraordinary man.

When the mists of material thinking disperse—after the body material has disintegrated, after curiosity and sometimes malicious gossip has lowered its hydra-head, do we have the resurrection—the bringing to light the beautiful fruition of a lifetime work—the immortal record of the poet's patient, consistent and oftentimes excruciating labor. Then only can we properly evaluate the man or his work.

BY NOEL SULLIVAN

It was a fortunate day for this community when the Carmel Music Society (enabled through numerous contributions from friends and a very large one from the Blanchard bequest) decided to invest in a Steinway Concert Grand piano, and the Board of Directors of that organization are to be congratulated in having established as a policy to have this instrument heard as a regular part of the annual meeting.

On the evening of October 5 a fair-sized audience convened at Sunset Auditorium, and those who stayed away missed the opportunity of hearing a highly gifted and distinguished young pianist, who may well make a place for himself in the bracket of internationally recognized musicians.

That Robert Helps is an artist no one could doubt, and it was equally obvious that his technical equipment gave him complete freedom to express a deep intuitive feeling for the exigencies and subtleties of the great literature of music. His readings have none of the neurosis that is often associated with pianistic virtuosity, nor does he belong to the romantic school of performers. It seemed to this reviewer that he revealed, always in the framework of beautiful tone, a gift for highly varied dynamics and a clarity and austerity of interpretation which are seldom heard. Were it to be ascertained that he was an "artist-monk" on leave of absence from his monastery, I for one, after listening to him, should not have (Continued on Page Thirteen)

Duxbury Case Now In Hands Of D. A.'s Office

As far as the City of Carmel is concerned, according to Attorney Thomas Perry, Norman Duxbury, a registered Communist, has complied with the new state law by signing the required loyalty oath and apparently has committed neither perjury nor an illegal act. The matter is out of city hands and, according to the law, will be turned over to the district attorney's office for judgement and action.

Clyde Klaumann To Be Carmel's New Police Chief

Clyde Klaumann, a member of the Monterey Police Department for the past 14 years, has been appointed as Carmel's new chief of police following the resignation, early this week, of Roy Fraties, who is going into service with the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Fraties has been with the Carmel department since 1935.

Klaumann will take up his duties on October 20 and meanwhile, Harold (Mike) Stalter is acting chief. Stalter was appointed to the force last week.

Andrew Martin, police commissioner, said this week that Fraties' resignation will be accepted by the council with deep regret and added that he has had a splendid record (Continued on Page Four)

Kulkulkan Will Return In Glory At Artists' Ball

An Artists' Ball is to be given on November 25 at the Monterey Peninsula Country Club to raise money for the improvement and additions to the Carmel Art Association Galleries.

The theme is Pre-Columbian, specifically, Mayan, Aztec and Poltec civilizations before 1492. It celebrates the Feast of Kulkulkan, who was the great god of these peoples, and ruled mankind in the Golden Age when men lived in brotherly love, and all the arts flourished. Some astrologer happened and the great god disappeared over the Eastern Sea. Men prayed for his return to purge the world of the evil and darkness that had descended upon it. Every year, at this time, the mayors have a feast for him and have him return in effigy. He'll return at the Artists' Ball. Dan Totheroh, in charge of program, will arrange Kulkulkan's arrival.

Prizes will be given for the most beautiful, most authentic and the funniest costumes. Miss Elizabeth Niles will be asked to arrange a shelf of reference books at the Carmel Library, and illustrations of costumes will be displayed at the gallery, to assist the revelers in clothing themselves in suitable raiment. The authentic costumes, though dramatic and colorful, are easy to do, once the devotee has seen what they are like.

Committee: Pat Cunningham, general chairman; Dan Totheroh, Bruce Ariss, S. F. B. Morse, Jane Parker, Mrs. Julian Graham, Mrs. Mary Staley.

Whether Duxbury, however, will be allowed to continue as caretaker of the Forest Theater is another matter and this will be discussed at a special meeting of the city council which will be called by Mayor Allan Knight early next week.

Duxbury has been an unpaid city employee and as such was required to sign the oath to retain his status, along with all state, city, county and civilian defense employees. If an act of perjury is committed, the offender would face a prison term of from one to 14 years.

One of the matters to be discussed at the special meeting will be whether or not the Forest Theater actually needs a caretaker at this time. A few months ago a lease was signed with the Theater Guild and under the terms of the contract the Guild promised to keep up the grounds.

Carmel, never anxious to be in the public spotlight, received nationwide publicity last week with many newspapers running stories on the case and leading commentators discussing the problem.

On Wednesday Knight received calls from both Time Magazine and the New York Times for information on the case. It is believed to be a unique situation in the country with a registered Communist voluntarily signing the loyalty oath.

Duxbury has made it clear that he has never been a member of the Communist Party. He said that he once tried to get in but didn't make the grade.

Dollar Day Nets $600 For Carmel Youth Center Fund

Approximately $600 was raised at the Dollar Day event held last Saturday as a benefit for the Carmel Youth Center, with both merchants and high school students cooperating to make the affair a success.

Merchants participating agreed that the event should be an annual one and that in the future bargains not be limited to the dollar price. It has also been suggested that it be called Bargain Hunt or Bargain Fair, according to Oscar Balzar, chairman of committee in charge.

Several gifts have been made toward equipping the Youth Center during the week. The American Legion has donated a pool table. Bing Crosby's gift of a new $600 movie projector and screen have arrived. Mrs. Robert Stanton and Gladys Johnston each gave a piano; Capt. K. F. Bosshardt, a $400 shuffleboard; and the AWVS a $300 ice cream cabinet. Cash donations of $500 each from two individuals also came in to Fred Godwin, center maestro.

PADRES HOST SAN JOSE LICK TOMORROW AFTERNOON

A determined football team, three buses loaded with rooters, and a snappy band will converge on Bardarson Field tomorrow afternoon, and their primary objective will be to snap the Padres in skein at 15. James Lick, an 800 student high school in San Jose, will be making their first appearance in Carmel and will be going all out to make their debut a successful one. In their first outing this year, the San Jose boys dropped a 34-20 decision to the good Los Gatos eleven. Los Gatos got the jump on the willing Lick gridders, but the San Jose lads came fast in the second half to keep Los Gatos on the run. A nifty passing quarterback, Sanchez, guides the T formation for Coach Ed Alligee. Sanchez tossed three touchdown passes at Los Gatos and will test the pass defense of the ambitious Padres.

In a spotty performance against Gilroy, the Carmel eleven played hot and could football. When they are going in high gear, the local preps moved the hide for large chunks of yardage, but, when they dropped down a gear, Gilroy had them going in reverse. If the red and gray can put together four quarters of their top football, they will have a good chance of upsetting the big San Jose school.

At 12:30, Rolfe Leavitt's hustling band of lightweights tangle with the spirited Monterey Serra high school. Coaches Gardner and Varozza have a classy little team at Monterey and they will be favored to romp over the green Carmel lights. However, a double dose of fundamentals during the past weeks has put a sting in the Padrecito attack and a good offensive battle may be in the offing. Stoney Bruno, Serra's great fulback, will match running power against Don Leidig, the Padre Babe's Mr. Inside.

SUNSET SCHOOL TAKES LEAD IN YOUTH CENTER FOOTBALL

A nifty-passing, swift running gang of seventh graders from Sunset School took command of the top spot in Youth Center touch football play this week at they upset Gary Appleton's Gray Eights, 31 to 12. The Sunset crew has one win and a tie, while all the other teams have lost at least one game. In whipping the Gray

Eights, Sunset enjoyed a field day from an offensive standpoint. Touchdown number one came on a neatly executed pass from Grimm Mason to Mervyn Sutton. Shortly afterwards, Mike Mosolf wound up on the end of a reverse play and zoomed into the end zone for another big six. The same reverse play netted TD number three, while scores four and five came on the accurate throwing arm of pitcher Mason. Gary Appleton, Gray captain, tallied one TD for the Eights and passed to Paul Yementes for the other. Playing for the winners were: Chuck Solomon, Mervyn Sutton, Mark Hildebrand, Jimmy Konrad, Sonny Withrow, Mike Moslof, Grimm Mason, Bob Wise, George Wightman, and Roger Shields. For the Gray Eights, Paul Yementes, Merle Pitman, Craig Chapman, Millard Martin, Jimmy Hallett, Bill Ferguson, and Captain Appleton.

Danny Brosnan's Serra School team surprised Gary Nielsen's Red Eights by nipping them, 7 to 0, in Wednesday's tussle. Serra's score came on a 20 yard aerial from David Castagna to Paul Fratessa. Castagna's pass to Bill McCormick added the extra point. Playing for the winners: Jerry Kneedar, Paul Fratessa, David Roman, Mike Younkin, George Stoesser, Bill McCormick, Paul Duval, David Castagna, Leon Panetta, Richard Egan, Danny Brosnan, Wes Whitaker, and Robert Michela. For the Red Eights, Jon Chase, Pat Grimshaw, Ted Ledbetter, Pete Brickey, Bob Paddleford, Bob Alvarez, Tom Petty, Langdon Claypool, and Captain Nielsen.

Newt Goodrich, Jack Giles, Conrad Ege, and John Hicks tooted the whistles from the referee's position and kept the games going at a rapid clip. Next Wednesday, Serra clashes with Sunset and Red Eight engages in a civil war with Gray Eight's on Thursday.

LOBOS DUMP MODESTO, 20-14; S. F. CITY COLLEGE NEXT

Riding to victory on the speedy legs of fullback Al Mathews, the Monterey Peninsula College got off to a good start in the quest for their first football championship in junior college circles. The muscular Mathews carried the hide 26 times and as was unstoppable as a football player can be. Whenever yardage was needed Al's number was up and the objective was accomplished. Modesto put on their peak offensive show in the first half which ended 7 to 6 in favor of the Pirates. However, the Monterey boys came out winging in the second half and racked up a brace of tallies while the visitors were collecting one. The Lobos had their backs to the wall as the time ran out to end the game, but they had the coveted victory in the bag. As Mathews was to the offense, Dick Weer and Nat Agliano were to the defense. These two stalwarts messed up the Modesto attack so badly that visiting scouts were unable to determine whether Coach Earle was using the T, single wing, double wing, or short punt.

Tomorrow night, Jim Tidwell takes his flag chasers to San Francisco to meet San Francisco City College at the State College Field. All hands are in tip-top condition for the fray and a victory is in sight.

PADRES TRIP GILROY, 32 TO 6; UPDIKE RUNS WILD

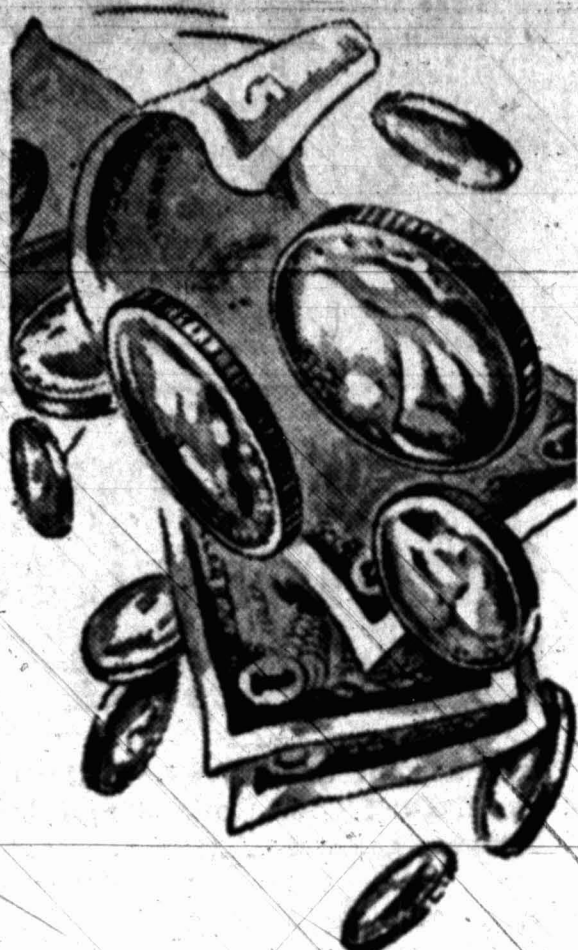

A hard-charging determined line in front of hard-running backs proved too tough for Gilroy High School's defense last Friday night as the Padres rode the Mustangs for a 32-6 victory. Crisp blocking and vicious tackling produced a pair of touchdowns for the Padres in the first 4 minutes of the game. After losing the ball on a fumble following the first kickoff, the stubborn red and gray defense stymied the Mustangs attack and Carmel took charge on their own 25 yard line. Bob Updike, a barrel-chested piston-legged halfback, slanted through the Gilroy left tackle, and behind knock-down blocking, zoomed 55 yards before being hauled down. It took one more play for Henry Overin to make the necessary 12 yards for the first TD. The Padres took the ball away on downs following the next kickoff and marched 60 yards in 5 plays. Updike's 25 yarder set 'em up for the score. Sturdy blocking by May, Burger, and McDonald sent Updike on a 40 yard punt return for the third Carmel tally. Henry Overin made good on one out of three place-kicks to make the halftime score, 19 to 0, Carmel leading.

Gilroy came to life in the second half and held the sputtering Padres to a pair of touchdowns while racking up one for themselves. A shifty quarterback, Sarpaza, ran and passed the Mus-

Board Votes To Grant Three Student Holidays

To enable teachers in all schools in the Carmel Unified School District to become better acquainted with other institutions than their own, the board of trustees, in a meeting Tuesday evening, set aside three dates as pupil holidays.

On October 18 pupils at the Carmel Woods School will be free while the faculty will visit Sunset and the high school; October 25 will be the Sunset holiday while November 1 will be a holiday for high school students.

On those dates the teachers as part of institute program will observe methods in effect at other schools and will also be able to observe the work of their former students. The result is expected to be even better intergration between Carmel's schools.

Enrollment figures as of October 10 showed the high school to have 297 students as against last year's 288, while the elementary schools have 533 as compared to 503 for the last term.

Arthur Hull made a report on classroom conditions and the board is now considering the possibility of turning the cafeteria at the Carmel Woods school into a classroom. The matter will be taken up again at a later date.

Athletic officials from the high schools in this district, according to a report by George Mosolf, met at Salinas last Monday and Carmel High School received high praise as the number one school for sportsmanship. Officials from other schools agreed unanimously that it was the choice one for referees and other official duties.

Stuart Mitchell, superintendent, made a report on a convention of trustees and superintendents that he attended last week in San Diego.

P. T. A. Lectures Off To Good Start

Last Thursday night marked the beginning of another series of lectures discussions and films on the emotional development of the pre-school and grammar child. This lecture series, running for the next five Thursday nights at 8 in the Sunset School cafeteria, is sponsored by the Carmel Parent-Teacher Association and the Carmel Adult School. The series will deal specifically with the problems encountered in adolescence, as well as with the total emotional development of young people.

Last night's large audience listened attentively to a discussion of The Adolescent Child, to be followed next week by another of the films which proved thought-provoking and interesting last spring.

With the films and the lectures, at the end of the series two plays will be presented by Lee Crowe, and including in the cast Ruth Marion McElroy, David Eldridge and Lee McKenney.

The public is invited to all lectures.

GELETT BURGESS TO SPEAK

Gelett Burgess will be Mrs. Glenn Clairmonte's first guest speaker of the season, next Tuesday evening, October 17, in Room 11 of Sunset School. His topic is Modern Scientific Research on Shakespeare Authorship. He has some ideas about Shakespeare's identity which will interest many Carmelites, and his delivery will prove his reputation as a wit.

The Carmel Adult School invites the public to attend. The meeting will begin at 7:30, will be thrown open to questions at 8:30, and will close at 9, as usual.

Large Crowd Will Attend Dog Show

With 103 more entries than last year, the Del Monte Kennel Club Show to be held at Del Monte Lodge next Sunday is also expected to draw a record crowd, as indicated by the advance sale of tickets.

There are more than 600 entries, representing 66 different breeds. In addition to the regular showing, which will be benched, there will also be the obedience tests and a demonstration of army-trained dogs by D. C. A. Roy.

The show, which will be held on the lawns below the Lodge, will begin at 9 o'clock and will continue until the judging of best in show which is expected to be around 9 in the evening. Proceeds will go to both the S.P.C.A. and Peninsula Pets.

with the department. Klaumann's appointment has been unanimously approved by council members. He is 38 years of age and was born on the Peninsula. He attended Monterey High School, where he was a star athlete, and he served with the Navy for two years during World War II. He is married and the father of a son. He is now looking for a suitable residence here.

His appointment drew repercussions from Monterey. It seems that he was eligible for an FBI post similar to that which Fraties will have, but the Monterey police Department and the city government had refused to grant him a release, necessary under FBI regulations. A petition had been drawn up and signed by 200 irate citizens, but Klaumann, in the meantime, decided to accept the Carmel post.

Fraties first joined the force in 1936 and was named chief on August 7, 1940. Born in Salinas, he was graduated from Salinas High School. Since that time he had spent most of his time here.

He has three children, Gus, Roy and Frates, a junior student at Stanford University and a veteran of the last war; Mrs. Gus Weiser, wife of Major Weiser who is with the Air Force now in Korea and Arvid, 5. The Weisers have two children, Solveig, 7, and Sten, 4. Frates was called to Washington before he expected to be and left for the East Monday. Mrs. Frates will join him when he receives his permanent assignment.

LIESEL WINNER

Although Liesel Wurzmann of Pine Gates on San Carlos street has been carving wood for two years, she exhibited for the first time at the recent county fair, and won second prize for her figure called The Kid, in the Amateur Wood Sculpture Group.

The board passed a resolution to make changes in the site chosen for the new sewer pumping station and October 23 was set as the date for a public hearing. Attorney Shelburn Robison explained that the period between now and then will give the board opportunity to discuss the Carmel Mission objections to the site. Decision will depend on expenses and availability of other sites.

RADIOS FOR ORD HOSPITAL

Table model radios are being provided for bed-ridden soldiers at Fort Ord Hospital, thanks to American Red Cross.

A total of 28 radios has been requested by hospital officials, and local chapters are co-operating to provide them. Watsonville chapter has already sent its quota of six, and Carmel will purchase five as soon as possible, according to Mrs. Rush Wallace, chairman of Entertainment and Instruction at Ord. Funds for the purchase are available in Mrs. Wallace's budget, and the expenditure was approved at the monthly meeting of the Directors on October 11.

Repair and maintenance of the new radios can now be handled through craft shops at the fort.

Carmel Work Center Weekly Notes...

By Carol Tindell

There is something extra-special on display at the Carmel Work Center this week... charming Redwood Bird Houses and Feeding Stations made by Frank La Fontaine. These Bird Houses have that quaint Carmel charm... beautifully made too. They are hard to find you know, so we feel you should take a minute to see them. If you feed and house your "feathered friends" they may retaliate by not dining off your prize flowers.

Are there any craftsmen in Carmel who have been wanting to drop into see us but have been too busy? If so, just call Douglas Fisher at 7-6990 and he will be happy to talk to you about your work.

Have we told you about Glen Minshall's "Pansy Vases"? They are the solution to how to arrange short stemmed flowers and not have them look as though you just shoved them into a vase and gave up. The vases are not only very attractive but reasonably priced.

If you haven't received one of our catalogs (guaranteed to make Christmas buying easy and fun) it's not because we don't want you to have one, it's just that we don't have your address. So please give us your address and we will

Players Better Than Their Vehicle In New Production At Wharf Theatre

BY JOHN UPTON

Little theater audiences often feel cheated. After even a first-rate production, they come away with a suspicion that the players have had more fun than the ticket-holders. When the opposite is true, as it was last week end with director Dan Totheroh's Wharf Players production of The Happiest Years, it's a pretty good sign that a successful company is in the making.

Why playwrights Thomas Coley and William Roerick chose to call their play The Happiest Years remains unexplained. It concerns itself with the minor domestic dilemmas of a university student and his wife, and as theatrical fare has neither authority nor wit.

Yet Totheroh and his troupe have handled its brassy broadside with a vigor almost worthy of the Restoration stage, and the result is convincing, cheerful, and at times uproariously funny.

Star of the present production is Kenn Smith, who plays a traveling salesman in the tradition of Sir Toby Belch. His aggressive goodwill and flow of platitudes are accompanied by such an air of innocence that it is hard to remember that he is the theater's producer and not a huckster of ladies' garments. Until he and his wife, admirably played by Betty Fowlston, burst upon the scene, the play moves rather slowly. Thereafter, and particularly in the last act, they set the pace for a great deal of fast and amusing dialogue.

In casting Burton Minkin as Roger Littlefield, the harassed little lowerclassman who blunders into a family squabble and is unable to back out of it, Totheroh showed near genius. Some of the most effective stage business in any theater centers on Littlefield's hat, which Minkin mangles to a rag in his acute embarrassment. This is his first appearance with the Wharf Players, and he will be a welcome addition in future productions.

Betty Fowlston plays the loud and warm-hearted visiting relative with such fine spirit and competence that it is surprising to learn that heretofore she has been kept backstage among the old costumes and lighting cables as stage manager. The exchange of dialogue between Kenn Smith and herself is a beautifully conceived parody of the conversation of

Looking for POWER?

Better Buy Buick!

THAT bold bonnet that stretches out before your eyes on a 1950 Buick isn't there just for show.

Lift it up, and you'll find that the space beneath is abundantly occupied, by one of the biggest hoodfuls of power you'll find in any motorcar.

What you're looking at is Buick's modern version of the high-compression valve-in-head engine, which gains extra wallop from the fact that it uses the exclusive Fireball combustion principle.

We could list a lot of mechanical reasons why fuel gives up extra power in a Fireball engine—how it's wrapped in a swirling, ball-shaped charge—how it burns with a smooth, clean thrust that delivers maximum action.

But the best way to find out what all this means is to touch off the eager horsepower out on the highway by a gentle nudge of your toe—and feel your shoulders press deep in the cushions behind them.

Now all this sounds thrilling, you say, but how about the feed-bills for all these horses? How about miles-per-gallon?

The practical answer to that one is found in this year's experience with the SUPER and SPECIAL—and even the ROADMASTER.

In all three, the horsepower was stepped up at the start of the year—and in all three, happy owners report the best mileage in modern Buick experience.

This is due to a little-known but authentic engineering fact—which is that an engine burns less gas when it doesn't have to labor. At any normal driving speed, therefore, extra power is extra thrifty.

So we say again—if you're looking for power—mighty power—buoyant power—silken power—thrifty power—better buy Buick.

Your Buick dealer is eager for the chance to demonstrate how sound this hint really is.

Only BUICK has Dynaflo-Drive[®] and with it goes HIGHER-COMPRESSION Fireball valve-in-head power in three engines. (New F-263 engine in SUPER models.) • NEW-PATTERN STYLING, with MULTI-GUARD forefront, taper-through fenders • TRAFFIC-HANDY SIZE, less over-all length for easier parking and garaging, short turning radius • EXTRA-WIDE SEATS, cradled between the axles • SOFT BUICK RIDE, from all-coil springing, Safety-Ride rims, low-pressure tires, ride-steadying torque-tube well-meaning and insensitive people everywhere.

Bee Mouser, Carmel businesswoman, makes her stage debut as Miss Wentworth, the timid librarian who rents a room in the turbulent Graves household. Her performance is one of the most satisfying of the evening. There is an alert, birdlike quality about her spinster role that does much to heighten the sparkle of the last act.

Beverly Porter and Alex Olivetti, as the young biology student and his neglected wife, are more than adequate as foils for Bill Fort and Dee Olivetti, the patient college professor and his psychotic spouse who snarls the internal economy of the home with her compulsions. Mrs. Olivetti is particularly effective in a highly demanding role.

Daniel Henderson plays the Other Woman with considerable flair, although her part is a minor and rather unconvincing one.

Totheroh's little company is shaping up into a closely-knit organization with considerable talent and spirit. As a demonstration of their versatility, The Happiest Years is an interesting presentation and in many ways a highly amusing one, but it does not give the Wharf Players the kind of material they need. There is little genuine drama or comedy in the daily bickerings of a group of rather bewildered people, even when given such competent production. The Happiest Years runs this week end and next, Thursday through Sunday nights, at the little theater on Fisherman's Wharf, Monterey.

William Silva Oils Shown in South

An exhibition of 30 oil paintings of the late William P. Silva is now being held at the Frances Webb Galleries in Los Angeles, and will continue until the end of the month, according to Abbott Silva.

Mr. Silva, who had lived in Carmel since 1912, died in 1948. A successful businessman, he retired before 1912 and came to Carmel to continue with his hobby of painting and to make an active career of it.

Three of his paintings were shown at Ogunquit, Maine, while a one-man show was held at the Carmel Art Gallery in 1946.

Why is Driver Education required by the state? What is done for safety on the athletic field and in the shop? Is there danger of explosion in the chemistry laboratory? Just how does school insurance protect the student?

Other citations from the Bible and from the Christian Science textbook "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, which will comprise the sermon, include the following: Job 33:23, 24: "If there be a messenger with him, an interpreter, one among a thousand, to shew unto man his uprightness: Then he is gracious unto him, and saith, Deliver him from going down to the pit: I have found a ransom."

Science and Health: "We acknowledge Jesus' atonement as the evidence of divine, efficacious Love, unfolding man's unity with God through Christ Jesus the Way-shower; and we acknowledge that man is saved through Christ, through Truth, Life, and Love as demonstrated by the Galilean Prophet in healing the sick and overcoming sin and death" (p. 497).

Most folks probably think of a corporation like ours in terms of a name... Standard Oil Company of California."

Actually, a company is people... people working together.

In our case, 27,900 men and women work to bring you the products you buy from us. They each contribute special skills and abilities, live their own lives in many different places. You'll find their houses down the block, pass them on the street, sit next to them at a movie.

In the extremely competitive oil business, it takes a lot of people—working with many expensive tools—to bring you good products at reasonable prices. For crude oil is a bulky, sticky liquid that's hard to handle. Taking oil from the ground, refining it, transporting it and pumping it into your car or oil burner is a continuous job... a job that can be done most efficiently when many people pool many talents within a coordinated organization.

That's why thousands of hands work at Standard to bring you good products... and to make sure oil flows in steady supply to America's planes, tanks, trucks and ships in times of national emergency.

Gift For Everyone From Kiwanis At Hallowe'en Party

Kiwanis President Art Hull announces that no child will be without a gift, if it be only a gay toy balloon, at the Kiwanis Club's Annual Hallowe'en party on All Hallowe'en Eve. Toys for all ages will be distributed.

This year the party is to be held on the Athletic Field of Sunset School, which will be gay with Autumn decoration and with booths of gifts, refreshments and contests. Ducking, bobbing, prizes and surprises will open the eyes of the youngsters beneath costume masks.

Since the best of all contests, and the juiciest prizes will go to the best costumes, Kiwanis committee members have expressed the hope that the art and home-making teachers, and the parents will instruct the youngsters in mask and costume making.

General Chairmen of Committees are Jack Martin and Gene Harrah. Judges headed by the Reverend Alfred Secombe will make awards for costumes in five age groups—zero to four years, four to seven, seven to eleven, eleven to fourteen, and fourteen to what have you! The best couple will also be awarded. And the Grand Sweepstakes Prize is a Government Bond.

The youngsters will hold sway in the Athletic Field from 7:00 to 8:30 sharp, where, in addition to competition, entertainment will be on hand in the form of music by the Carmel High School Band and the Carmel Youth Center Choir and Glee Club. There will be Variety Acts, Clowns, Acrobats, and Carmel's own Organ Grinder. Folk Dancers will swing and sway. Carved Pumpkin entries will add to the All Saints Eve flavor, competing for prizes.

At 8:30, those who wish may park off-spring with a select crew of baby sitters and join the dancers in the Gym until 11:30, to the strains of a famous local orchestra.

A town party for the whole town! It is given for Kids of Carmel, young, old, and in-between, by Carmel's Kiwanians, with the help of their friends. They sponsor it, run it, pick up the check, and clean up afterwards.

W. R. LaPorte To Conduct Auction For Beach Project

A professional's touch will be added to the Auction of Treasures when W. R. LaPorte presides at the October 28 event to raise additional funds for the purchase of Carmel River mouth beaches.

Mr. LaPorte, who heads the LaPorte Galleries of Pacific Grove, is widely known on the Peninsula and is donating his services and promoting interest in the forthcoming auction among buyers in neighboring communities.

Concept of the Auction of Treasures began when Mrs. J. W. Stilwell of Carmel donated a rare old Chinese shawl with the idea that it might be auctioned to raise funds for the beach project. The idea was met with enthusiasm. Many valuable and interesting articles have already been received, among them an authentic Japanese tapestry of white heron donated by Miss Jean Kellogg, old English pewter plates and tankered donated by Mrs. Yvonne Winslow, and a Mandarin coat donated by Mrs. Malcolm Millard.

Articles to be sold will range widely in price, and will include furniture, silver, textiles, fine porcelains, jewelry and other objects of art.

A preview of articles to be auctioned will be held on Friday, October 27, from 2-5 p.m. in the Carmel Girl Scout House at Lincoln and Sixth streets. The auction itself will follow on Saturday, October 28, from 1:30-5:30, at the same location.

Those wishing to make donations are asked to get in touch with Mrs. J. B. Spellar, Pebble Beach (7-3637), Mrs. W. H. Harrington of Carmel (7-4617) or Mrs. M. S. Millard of Carmel Highlands (7-3587). Pickup for donations will be arranged.

Artist's Autobiography

By ABEL G. WARSHAWSKY

Social customs in Majorca, inspired by the Near Orient, were very strict. One of the interesting sights was the evening promenade along the main thoroughfare, called the Rambla, men and women being strictly segregated into groups. A young man wishing to court a damsel would follow behind his belle, who closely chaperoned by her mother or a duenna, would listen to his compliments and protestations. If the mother was acting as chaperon, she would come in for an additional share of praise and compliment. I have seen the accepted suitor novio seated on a flight of stairs, several steps below his betrothed, too far to permit even of holding hands, while above them sat the duenna, silent and vigilant. Presumably the quality of Majorcan love passion is so inflammable, that even mutual hand pressure might cause an inextinguishable conflagration.

But once the betrothed is led to the altar, the love flame seems to diminish in ardor very rapidly. The young wife is definitely relegated to her home and is seen abroad only in company with her husband on the occasion of weekly visits to members of the family. The cafes are generally crowded with men folk, the few women who appear there being generally foreigners. Great hospitality to foreigners as shown by the various clubs on the island, where there were frequent dances and entertainments. But here, too, it was only foreign women who were seen dancing with strangers, the native ladies sitting apart, chatting and waving their fans. When they danced, it was only with a member of their own family.

Early summer brought heat and dust-laden winds, and a sudden longing for a cooler, grayer land, sent me back to the shores of the Seine.

That summer, 1926, in company of Joseph Kleitsch, the Californian painter, Leon and Natalie Gordon, I revisited Vernon, where, except for a fleeting visit, I had not stayed for 15 years. Despite its propinquity to Paris—less than 50 miles—hardly anything had changed in this quiet Norman town. True, the old Hotel Soleil d'Or had had its facade repainted and its charming name replaced by the more up-to-date title, Normandie Plaisance; a motor car had taken the place of the old hotel coach with its flat perch-ers, and running water was now to be found in all the guest rooms. But the amiable Madame Espagnon was still installed behind her counter, and the kindly Patron, grown a little grayer, was there to greet us with his former hospitality. Even my old room, with the well remembered view of towers and landscape greeted me unchanged, with a familiarity that was almost a pang. How much had taken place since I had sketched from those windows! Youth had fled with illusions and hopes which would charm me no more. But for all these changes within and without me, I felt, as I drank in the beauties from my window, that my enthusiasm to paint was as keen as it had been when I had my first glimpse of these lovely scenes.

But, alas, it was no longer possible to work by the roadside as in former times on account of the steady flow of motor traffic, which sent clouds of dust and sprinkled gravel over the easel. But the river banks and hillsides still offered many quiet nooks where one could work undisturbed.

Giverny, across the river, had undergone considerable changes. It had been rediscovered by a new group of Americans, very different from the old crowd, who had come there to work. To cater to these pleasure-seekers, and their weekend parties, several swaggar hotels had been erected.

Fortunately, Vernon still retained its old atmosphere of simplicity and tranquillity, and my friends were as charmed with it as I had hoped they would be. Kleitsch declared Vernon resembled his native town in Romania, which

NOSTALGIA

*Sorrow comes like November—
Seeps into the heart, unknown,
And from the grey mind rises like vapour
When the evening comes.
It is not now the time of sorrow
And yet my heart
Holds still its winter grief,
Like a pale flower
In a green garden.*

*When all the petals fall
And grief is spent
Fallow my heart shall lie
And sleep content.*

—MARGARET PAROUTAUD.

ENVIRONMENT

*All weathers have danger,
Are small thaws of change:*

*No child stands with cypress claw
Who is not also bent by fury
Nor grows tall and shallow
Who will not tumble
In the unwarned hour.*

*Many weathers maul the grownup year
And whether winds bend to earth
Or sky is flutesong,
No man walks
Who has not death nor weapon.*

—JAMES SPENCER.

WINTER

*I have written these verses when snow was falling, when air was clear, when a fire was burning,
when I could hear the wild geese calling,
and watch the ice on the lake returning.*

*And all I write I conceive for burning, for cities ruined, and sirens calling,
to the dead of winter, beyond returning,
to hope or haven, for fear of falling.*

—DAVID DEREK STACTON.

he had left in his early teens when setting out for America. Joe was the most astonishing mixture of ingenuousness and cunning I had ever met. His attempts at French were terrifying, yet in some mysterious fashion he managed to convey his every wish to the hotel personnel, though they spoke not a word of English. He was a competent and thorough artist, and while at Vernon painted many fine canvases, imbued with poetical feeling.

Leon Gordon was one of the pleiad of brilliant commercial artists who in conjunction with Edward Penfield and Armand, both under the direction of William Jean Beuley, the architect, himself a gifted water-colorist, had helped to revolutionize commercial art in America, and greatly raised its artistic standard. For some years past Gordon had abandoned his highly paid special line for the more precarious career of portrait painter, in which he was rapidly making headway. He had painted various celebrities. At intervals he had come to Europe, visiting Spain and Italy, where he studied the old masters. He was now painting outdoor scenes in the hope of keying up his palate.

Seldom have I met a more energetic and enthusiastic worker than this huge fellow, with the flashing dark eyes and typically Slavic face. Despite his bulk he was quick and active. A voluble theorist, he would argue until the early hours of the morning, keeping us awake in spite of ourselves with his theories for remoulding the world, shifting his line of argument with every whim that seized hold of his versatile mind, so that it was impossible to grapple with him; fully aware, in the meantime, of the fact that he was confusing us, but delighting in his powers deliberately to disconcert us with his diabolically clever forensic talents. But, like every great general who over-reaches himself, he came eventually to his Waterloo. His Wellington proved to be Jack Howard, son of Roy Howard of the Scripps Howard newspaper syndicate, who, with his wife and daughter, Jane, spent some time with us at Vernon. During one of our daily discussions Leon launched into one of his dazzlingly bewildering arguments. The next thing we knew young Jack had entered the lists. With the skill of a toreador baiting a bull he started pushing Leon from pillar to post with deadly barbs, of cold, pure logic, and flashing, clear-headed argument. For once an antagonist was found who proved to be too much for our indomitable Webster. Leon went crashing down to defeat. Our joy at Leon's discomfiture was ill concealed. But, we were yet forced to admit that, though he may have failed in this international debating bout, he still remained forensic champion when it came to the rest of us brush wielders.

Amongst others in our little colony at Vernon that season were Ethlyn Middleton, correspondent of The New York World, and Sam Chamberlain, the etcher, who was at work then on a well known series of old Norman farms and chateaus.

During a brief stay in America brother Alex had acquired a charming and talented young wife, well known in the style and commercial art world for her original and striking drawings of children. With my younger brother, David, they had come to join me for a period over the hot spell. To David, with his practical American slant on things it seemed preposterous that so much time could be wasted on outlandish char a brancs and brains for the daily excursions which we had planned to quaint villages and picturesque sights of historic interest. Hired taxis and cars proved themselves altogether too expensive, so David ended up by selling us the idea of buying a car. As an additional incentive he offered a generous share towards the proposed purchase, suggested only that we make a motor trip through Brittany. For years he had heard our comments on the beauty of that country, and had seen the studies we had painted there. The upshot of it all was that some weeks later the trio returned from Paris with a Mathis.

Who Runs America?

RUNNING AMERICA is the joint job of 150,000,000 people. It's the biggest job in the world today—keeping it running for liberty and for freedom. And the whole world's watching to see whether Americans can do it!

IN MUCH OF THE WORLD today, the people have resigned from running their own countries. Others have been quick to step in—first with promises of "security"—and then with whips and guns—to run things their way. The evidence is on every front page in the world, every day.

FREEDOM COMES UNDER ATTACK. The reality of war has made every American think hard about the things he's willing to work and fight for—and freedom leads the list.

But that freedom has been attacked here recently—just as it has been attacked in other parts of the world. One of the most serious threats to individual freedom has been the threat of Government-dominated Compulsory Health Insurance, falsely presented as a new guarantee of health "security" for everybody.

THE PEOPLE WEIGH THE FACTS. In the American manner, the people studied the case for Socialized Medicine—and the case against it.

They found that Government domination of the people's medical affairs under Compulsory Health Insurance means lower standards of medical care, higher payroll taxes, loss of incentive, damage to research, penalties for the provident, rewards for the improvident.

They found that no country on earth can surpass America's leadership in medical care and progress. They found that able doctors, teachers, nurses and scientists—working in laboratories where Science, not Politics, is master—are blazing dramatic new trails to health for Americans—and for the world.

THE "GRASS ROOTS" SIGNALS CONGRESS. In every community in the Nation, people stood up to be counted on this important issue. Thousands of local women's clubs, civic groups, farm, business, religious, taxpayer, medical, educational and patriotic organizations spoke out—giving the great United States Congress its unmistakable Grass Roots signal from home!

And ever watchful, ever sensitive to an alert people, The Congress saw that signal, and heard the people speak out, loud and plain. That's democracy in action. That's the American way!

Today among the 10,000 great organizations on militant public record against "Compulsory Health Insurance" are:

General Federation of Women's Clubs
American Farm Bureau
Federation
National Grange
Veterans of Foreign Wars
National Conference of Catholic Charities
American Protestant
Hospital Association

American Legion
National Association of
Small Business Men
United States Chamber of Commerce
National Association of
Retail Grocers
National Retail Dry Goods
Association
American Bar Association

• Doctors of this Nation are grateful that the people refused to be wooed by the fantastic promises of this un-American excursion into State Socialism. • Doctors of America are dedicated to serve their fellow citizens at home and their comrades in uniform, wherever service to this Nation may take them. • And the thing they stand ready to fight for—to sacrifice for—to die for—is not the alien way of life of Socialism, but the prideful security of a free and self-reliant people!

THE VOLUNTARY WAY IS THE AMERICAN WAY!

• Throughout the Nation, free men and women, working and planning together, are finding the American answer to every question of medical service, care and cost. Hundreds of Voluntary Health Insurance Plans are in healthy competition—sponsored by doctors, insurance companies, hospitals, fraternal organizations—by industry, agriculture and labor. • Today in America—70 million people are protected by Voluntary Health Insurance! • Throughout the Nation, families are insuring themselves against the major costs of illness—at reasonable, budget-basis prices. Voluntary Health Insurance takes the economic shock out of illness. Protect your family now. • For information, ask your doctor—or your insurance man.

An American's greatest heritage is the right to learn the facts—and to speak his mind. Maintained with honor and used with sincerity—that right will guarantee forever that

Review Of M. A. C. Members' Concert

By EBEN WHITTLESEY

The annual members concert of the Musical Arts Club drew a sizeable audience to Sunset Auditorium on Sunday evening. Stars of the performance were Angie Machado and Robert Forbes, whose two-piano presentations opened and closed the recital on a plain of high artistic merit.

It was the two-piano feature which necessitated the use of Sunset Auditorium by a group which generally appears in smaller and more intimate surroundings. Most of the remainder of the program was more suited to the comparative intimacy of the Woman's Club than to the size and acoustical rigors of Sunset. Thomas L. Griffin, whose large and well-trained bass voice has been enjoyed by many audiences on the Peninsula, sang some interesting and rather difficult songs. The songs were selections from Ernst Bacon's opera A Tree on the Plain. Mr. Bacon, with whom the artist worked in North Carolina, will be remembered as the first conductor of the Carmel Bach Festival. Mr. Griffin used clear diction, and the quality of his voice, particularly in the lower range, was pleasing and effective. He was ably accompanied by his wife, Marie Griffin.

An unusual feature of the program was the reading by Ross Worsley, of a group of his poems. Some of these were inspired while the poet was a guest of Noel Sullivan in the Carmel Valley, several years ago. The poems were selected from Mr. Worsley's six published works. Notable were Shadows of the Sea, dealing with the local scene, and Shot with Comets written on the poet's first experience of an Eastern snow-storm.

Ruth Cooke, contralto, ably accompanied.

companied by Noel Sullivan, sang three songs in a rich, well-trained voice. The most effective was Bergere Legere by Weckerlin, given in a flowing, easy style, and lying in the artist's best range.

The performance of Miss Machado and Mr. Forbes was ample reward in itself to the large audience. There was fleet, light execution in two movements from Clementi's Sonata in B Flat; while color and movement dominated the Pastorale by Scarlatti. In their last group, with Mr. Forbes at the large Steinway, a Rachmaninoff suite was played by the two artists with great force and clarity and smooth shading. The Arensky Waltz Suite brought the program to an end with splendid execution of this rather scintillating music. I have never heard better integration and balance between two pianos.

The Time Has Come...

By Kippy Stuart

The oddest things happen in response to the written word. No matter how hard one tries to make subjects clear, some twist will creep in that confuses someone. Recently I went to town repudiating any effort to plant greenery between flag stones. That's my story and I am going to stick to it. I did suggest, that if one were determined to suffer through a period of weeding, that ground thyme was about as good as anything else.

I received a telephone call from a lady who wanted to know how to plant ground thyme. It was the goofiest conversation I ever got mixed up in; you know one of those "mistaken identity" jobs.

Voice: How do you plant ground thyme, Mrs. Stuart?

Me: You either get cuttings or roots.

Voice: But how can you get roots of ground thyme?

Me: Any nursery will supply you with cuttings or roots.

Voice: But I already have a big bottle full.

Me: Bottle full! What do you mean? It there ventilation in the bottle?

Voice: Oh no, I keep the cork tight.

Me: Well, I guess by this time that your thyme is a dead-duck. Any growing thing needs not only ventilation, but dampness.

Voice: But I never let my spices get damp.

Me: Spices? What on earth are you talking about?

Voice: I'm only trying to follow your directions, Mrs. Stuart. You did recommend ground thyme between flag stones, didn't you? Well I've got a whole bottle of ground thyme on my pantry shelf, and I thought...

I'll let you fill in the rest. This lady was going to sprinkle her spice between the flag stones hoping for a crop.

I certainly started something when I went to town with my personal objections about planting stuff and stuff between flag stones. Okey! Go ahead and plant cabbages between those stones if you want to! Mine was only one woman's opinion anyhow. So, to placate those who disagree with me, I will suggest other ground cover for the patio.

Camomile is a good bet. Camomile is a form of soft moss, that is, one variety of Camomile hugs the ground. Dichondra repens is another soft ground cover that lends itself to filling the spaces between rocks. Helxine is a very fine moss to be planted only in shady spots. You probably know Helxine under the common name of Baby Tears. Lippia, an herb of the verbena family, makes a nice soft carpet. Any of these plants will soften the harsh rocks, and if tended properly, which means weeding almost every day, satisfactory results may be obtained.

One way to prevent too many weeds from creeping in, is to have the bottom of flag stones cemented to the ground. Leave spaces between rocks and sprinkle with good earth. Then stick in your cuttings or roots of this or that, and you won't be back-broken trying to keep the weeds away. I'll still hold for cement for the entire job.

Harriet Duncan Show

Green asters, light pink snapdragons and golden chrysanthemums arranged in table bouquets, added a touch of outdoor life to the dining room of the Pine Inn last Wednesday, for the Harriet Duncan Sing a Song of Separates fashion show-luncheon.

Pat Harn started the fall fashion show modeling an Eisenhower-plaid flight jacket, with matching slacks. A white fireman's shirt added the proper contrast.

Carrying a ukulele and showing the spectators how well-dressed the younger set can be, was Barbara Berg when she wore a multi-colored, pleated flannel shirt, topped with a brown cashmere sweater and a flowered scarf.

Introducing a new color, azalea, Mrs. Tony Kastros modeled a jersey suit of that shade. The becoming ensemble featured push-up sleeves, a boat neck, and was draped with a peg top shirt.

The show then turned from casual wear to after dark, hostess apparel.

For late afternoon or evening dates, Jeri Champlain proved the versatility of velveteen when she modeled a long-sleeved dress of gold velveteen, accented by a high, stand-up collar, and self buttons down the front. She added contrast with a corsage of pink chrysanthemums, worn at the neck.

A touch of Spain or Mexico came in with Mrs. Glenn Kemp when she modeled a frosted-brown, braided matador skirt of velvet. She wore a wool blouse of eggshell white, brightened by brown sequines.

A lei of pink flowers worn around the neck of Joyce Hare blended into a Hawaiian theme, as she wore a black strapless dress of velvet sheath. For added glamour and versatility, she had a matching, white satin-lined stole draped over her shoulders.

For originality and warm smiles in the cold of winter, the green felt skirt modeled by Margaret Luker is a winner. A white snowman is appliqued on the left side. She wore with it a wool jersey blouse of window-white.

Mary Kastros drew many sighs with her long-sleeved, high-necked blouse of Challis wool, imported from Switzerland. A gold, woolen skirt matched the designs on the blouse.

Deborah Geering looked both dressy and casual in her tangerine velveteen slacks, with a green jersey blouse, on which were two sequined appliques.

Other models, wearing ensembles of wool, velvet, and featuring winter colors, were Kathleen Whitaker, Joanne Nix, Sherrie Henderson, Lois Whetstone, Alice Wheelless and Mrs. Jack Dalzell.

P.T.A. Meeting

"Modern education is no longer in an experimental stage," said Rosa Doner, director of the Carmel Cooperative Nursery School, at the regular monthly meeting of the Carmel P.T.A. Tuesday, October 10. Mrs. Doner's theme, Foundation Planting, was ably presented.

Miss Florence Morrow, school nurse, reported Dr. James Finley, Carmel chairman for the dental survey arranged for three examinations last year for the first grade. The second grade is to be included this year. Early care was stressed in order to have better permanent teeth.

Mrs. Glenn Minshall urged everyone to participate in the Halloween party planned by the Kiwanis club to be held on the Sunset playground October 31, 7 p.m. Prizes will be awarded for the best costumes. A dance for the teenagers will start at 9 in the cafeteria.

Mr. George Mosolf, director of recreation, reported all phases of the summer program were better attended than in previous years. He promises an expanded adult program. A suggestion for a "mothers" swimming class met with a warm reception. The Well-Baby Clinic is to be held the first Thursday of each month in the Wayfarer House, phone 2-4583 for an appointment. Volunteer workers are needed to assist in the clinic.

Mrs. Fred Farr, legislative chairman suggests a "No" vote on propositions one and six on the November ballot.

Superintendent of Schools Stuart Mitchell home from the Trustees and Superintendents' convention in San Diego reports, "we will be losing the war at home if school institutions are allowed to suffer. Priorities are needed for school construction and retention of teachers subject to draft call. Democracy requires an intelligent electorate to function properly. This will be gained only if we have a long range policy in education."

Back From Hunting

Fred Godwin is back with a 250 pound buck, snared on a hunting trip at Bing Crosby's Ranch in Pleasant Valley, near Elko, Nev. Guests on the ranch at the same time were Pittsburgh Pirates Wally Westlake and Bill Deming.

BIG SUR SIERRA CLUB TRIP

Local members are reminded that the Loma Prieta Chapter of the Sierra Club has scheduled a trip to the Big Sur the coming week end. It is planned to camp in individual camp sites at the park Saturday night and hike Sunday morning. This will be an easy walk of about six miles to the high point just west of the park. The hikers will meet the leader, Fremont Ballou, of Carmel, in front of the lodge at 9:30 a. m.

CARMEL MEN STATIONED AT FORT ORD

Two Carmel men are among the 100 inductees who arrived at Ord October 6 for processing. Noel Clarabut, 23, Carmel police officer, hopes he'll be stationed at Ord, and be assigned to Military Police. He says he has a ranch nearby and wants to keep an eye on it.

Ben Viljoen, 23, electrical technician for the Carmel school district, wants to study radio and radar in the army.

PEKE SHOW PLANNED

Under the auspices of the Pekingese Club of Central California, a sanctioned match will be held Saturday, Oct. 14, at Pebble Beach. Some 35 Pekes have been entered. Trophies will be offered in all classes. Champion Wong Loy from Mountain View is to be exhibited. A number of puppies may be for sale. All Peke enthusiasts are cordially invited.

DONOR DAY SIDELIGHTS

Almost the last civilian act of Noel Clarabut, former police officer was to volunteer as blood donor at the last Donor Day of the local Red Cross. Following his resignation from the police department, he had a week's vacation and then was inducted at Fort Ord.

Donors of O type blood at the last Blood Donor Day have the Pacific ocean between them and the blood they gave to the Red Cross. The blood was typed the same day it was donated, and all O type was flown immediately to Korea.

Robert Helps Gives Brilliant Performance Music Society Concert

His program, which included two Scarlatti sonatas, a work by Franz Liszt, the Roger Sessions sonata and Estampes of Debussy, was not too palatable for a good many in the audience, who nevertheless recognized Robert Helps' extraordinary ability, and at least everyone was in agreement that here there were no "war horses" of repertoire.

In recalling some of the comments provoked by Helps' selections, it seems to me indicated that everyone might well challenge a tendency to underestimate the music of Liszt. For the last 25 years it has been thought by some of the "avant-garde" to be pompous and vulgar. Vladimir Horowitz was the first to eradicate any such impression from my mind. He acknowledged Liszt to be a giant musician in a century that had produced the world's greatest, and the originator of harmonic combinations later exploited by Wagner. But Liszt was not satisfied just to compose and to perform. His genius also included a profound awareness of the musical heritage that was his, and he followed with magnanimity and generosity its evolution through the long span of his life, acclaiming loudly the work, both creative and interpretative, of his contemporaries, many of whom he was the first to recognize. It may seem irrelevant to mention here a reaction of some of the "cognoscenti" who have recently visited the Viennese Art Exhibit in San Francisco. To some it was regarded almost as a waste of time, and Rubens and Veronese were dismissed as unimportant in the supposedly dazzling light of the economy and directness of modern painters. Such a judgment appears to me to lack all historical perspective. It is self-evident that, as of 1950, we would have no place for the huge canvases of eighteenth century artists in our bungalows today, but this should not blind us to their fabulous achievement of imagination and technique, any more than twentieth century standards should justify us in turning a deaf ear to the rhapsodic outpouring of a musician, to whom, let us say, the French Revolution was still a "noble experiment!"

In Liszt's Variations on a Theme played by Robert Helps (the Theme was actually from the Crucifixus of the B Minor Mass) there were climactic effects which I doubt any other composer of piano music could have excelled. Seldom have I, at least, heard the piano sing "fortissimo" when its turbulence was so fully justified that no tone sounded forced.

A comment from another music lover the other evening: "I don't like variations," seems to invite a reply. Had this composition been called "Fantasia", I doubt that anyone would have detected the Variations as they developed. And if we are going to eliminate "Variations" of all composers, an impoverishing farewell will have to be said to many of the gems of Mozart, Beethoven, Schubert, Schumann, Mendelssohn, Brahms and Franck.

It was an informative experience to hear the Sessions sonata, but what familiarity can one hope to attain in ten minutes, with a serious work of this magnitude? Ears hungering for delight were given their fill in the magical compositions of Debussy and two Chopin encores which followed.

A Page from My Diary, a musical fragment by Sessions, was the last encore. It placed us back again in the "unlovely" twentieth century, from which, thanks to Robert Helps, we had been able momentarily to escape and glimpse again a panorama of the past. Achieving these transitions requires enthusiasms as well as objectivity. Helps has potentially as much of the latter as Artur Schnabel, whom he greatly admires, and his 22 years of life have as yet made no dent in his enthusiasm!

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

Ought To "Polish Up" Her Traffic Manners!

Spent most of yesterday over at the Court House. "Tiny" Fields, the biggest and fastest-talking of our three policemen, was holding forth about his traffic troubles.

"Women drive just as good as men do," Tiny said, "and just as bad. For instance—a girl in a convertible today. She started a three-block tie-up all by herself.

"She's creeping down Main Street—left hand stuck out and sort of waving around. Never turns right or left, never stops. But, of course, every one behind her thinks she's signaling about something. Nobody dares to pass. When I stop her and ask what's up, she smiles sweetly and explains that she's drying her nail polish!"

From where I sit, that girl's typical of certain folks who are so wrapped up in themselves, they never notice they're not being fair to others. Our neighbor has a right to drive in safety—just as he has a right to enjoy a glass of beer. Let's all respect the other fellow's rights.

tangs to their six-pointer.

Although backs, Updike, Overin, Moran, Stoney, and Emery rambled for plenty of yards against the scrappy Mustangs, it was the stubborn line play of Hans and Frans Doelman, Niels Reimers, Buzzy May, Thor Rasmussen, Syl Burger, Howard Veit, Sam Robison, Gerald McDonald, and Pete Newell which took the sting out of the Gilroy attack. These sturdy linemen throttled the shifty Gilroy halfbacks and put terrific pressure on the passing quarterbacks.

Except for Bill Daniel's split finger, the Padres came out of the battle unscathed and will be at top strength for their tussle with James Lick tomorrow. Bill picked up a few stitches on his left hand but will be fit and ready at kickoff time tomorrow.

The Carmel lightweights put up a good showing against the Gilroy reserves before dropping a 6-0 decision. A blocked kick followed by a 10 yard sprint around the Carmel right flank put the Gilroy Babes on the scoreboard. Most of the game was played in the middle of the field, with neither team able to generate much offensive steam. Fine defensive play by Don Leidog, Pablo Palick, Said Meheen, Bradley Dixon, and Ron Wolverton highlighted the Carmel play.

Sterling Authority Speaks At Dedication Honoring Poet

mous with that of Carmel as Jack London is with the Valley of the Moon or that of William Wordsworth with the Lake District.

Time was when our population was composed mostly of Californians who knew much of the background of their native state—others were related directly or indirectly with the old pioneer families. But in recent years has come an unprecedented influx of new population. Many of those who knew George Sterling have passed from the scene—most recently Frederick Bechdolt, Haig Patigan and Una Jeffers. The first, a writer of the West, the second, nationally celebrated sculptor who made the Sterling death mask, and our lovely Una Jeffers, so recently gone from us—a rare soul, Una of Carmel, charming, unselfish, beloved by all who were privileged to know her.

Carmel is often spoken of as a "State of mind" . . . also as an Artists' Colony. It is both an artists' and a writers' colony today, but originally it was a writers' colony and the one writer was Mary Austin. Then came George Sterling in 1905 and in 1906, Nora May French, exquisite poet that she was . . . Jimmie Hopper and Frederick Bechdolt. All the writers, so I am told, lived in what was called the '80 acres."

The second influx came in 1910. Michael Williams, Sinclair Lewis, William Rose Benet, Grace Cook and her daughters, Kit and Helen, her sister, Alice McGowan, Perry Newberry and Harry Leon Wilson. Wilson married Helen Cook and it was here at Ocean Home, the home of Harry Leon Wilson, that I first met George Sterling. Just a slip of a girl, I was quite impressed with the poet in his forest-green golf suit, brown hose and green cap and, I believe, rather high walking boots—"a saintly, whimsical, vagabondish man," is a perfect description. He was often spoken of as being as indigenous to the landscape "as a shepherd in goatskins to the hills of Thrace."

When Sterling first came, Carmel had one butcher shop, which opened twice a week. The Schwengers had a bakery and Slevin his notions store. The Post Office was outside the porch of Slevins. The village barber held forth in a tent. Old Sam Powers drove the stage from Monterey to Carmel. No one ever locked doors and windows were always open. The Forest Theater started after the arrival of Bert and Opal Heron—two wonderful people. George loved the outdoor Forest Theater and took an active part in its plays. Houses rented for $6.00 a month.

The third influx consisted of mainly Stanford professors . . . a few from the University of California, summer people and a few business people. Waterfront lots along the beach sold for $5.00.

and, strangely enough, they did not meet Sterling until 1924. As Una Jeffers said to me: "We were just coming onto the scene as George was leaving." In one of her letters to me, speaking of Sterling, she said: "During the last year of his life more days than not, there was something in the mail from him—a book, magazine, poem—or a jack knife for our boys!—then nine years old."

It was only natural that George Sterling should love primitive Carmel. His vacation days at Sag Harbor were spent roaming the woods. No limb was too high for him to climb in search of birds' eggs for his enviable collection. So in Carmel, his Paradise by the Pacific, it was the simplest pursuits that gave him the most pleasure—swimming the breakers, swinging along with axe over his shoulder, looking for pitch pine or bee-trees. He was a remarkable shot and when ducks were flying over the river mouth, he would return to his home with his game bag filled with canvasback, teal or mallard, retrieved by his dog, Laddie.

He loved to go after abalones—would wade into the icy surf above his waist and found it a keen exhilarating sport to pry the mollusks from the rocks. Then he and a group of friends would enjoy driftwood fires, mussel-bakes by moonlight—or they would gather at his cabin and pound abalone, each contributing a verse, such as:

"Oh, some folks boast of quail on toast
Because they think it's toney;
But I'm content to owe my rent
And live on abalone."

Edward O'Day said: "Of the influence Carmel exerted on Sterling's poetry, it is enough to say that if you subtracted the inspiration of Carmel from his published volumes, you would take away much of his significant work. It isn't too much to assert that without Carmel George Sterling would have been a different poet from the one we came to know and value."

George often said that the writers of Carmel were overrated and its scenery underrated—modest George Sterling.

In my estimation, George Sterling was a religious man—that is, he exemplified the qualities of a Christian in his attitude toward other men. One could spend an hour or more on this phase of Sterling's life and then not do him justice. He said: "The world is my cathedral. Its creator is my God."

To mention Ambrose Bierce opens up an entirely new phase of Sterling's life. Suffice it to say, after Bierce's laudatory praise for Sterling's "Testimony Race," showing the futility of civilization, the rise and fall without end of nations, of men's ideal structures. . . Sterling did not write such a poem, but Robinson Jeffers, who in the world of poetry, like his great Tor House, stands preeminently alone, did write such a poem.

Among my prized possessions are five letters written to Robinson Jeffers by George Sterling and given to me by Una Jeffers. The letter needs no comment of mine—listen carefully, for his prophecy has come true. For 26 years this letter has not seen the light of day—so to speak—may I share it with you?

Bohemian Club San Francisco
July 1st, 1924.

"Dear Robinson Jeffers:

I should long since have acknowledged the gift of "Tamar," but I've been reading it over and over, trying to convince myself that it's not the strongest stuff ever written—and failing in the attempt.

"I am very sincere in saying that it is a most tremendous poem, and that you clasp hands with the great Greeks across Time. It is not a pleasant poem. In fact, it recalled to me a phrase of Bierce's about "a tangle of snakes under a wet rock." But for power, for terror, even for weird witch-lights of beauty, there seems to me to be nothing like it in English. Anyone that can read it, live a hundred years and not remember it, passes out of human categories. I wish that my poor pen could do the poem justice. I find myself grabbing adjectives, examining them with distrust, and laying them back in the pile. Let me at least say that you make all your American song-brothers seem rather small folk, writing zealously in your great shadow.

"There is no waste in this book, though naturally so terrific a poem as "Tamar" dwarfs stuff that is in itself of the gods—poems like, well, like all of them!

"You will come into your own some day—"Tamar" can no more be stopped or put off the map than a glacier. But it may take a long time. Meanwhile, be it said of me that I "saw you,

Knew you, and named a star."
I hope to see you nearer, some day.

George Sterling."
